Introduction

Hey Guys! I've decided to put aside my Winterwatcher Fanfic for now, but instead I will be doing a new Fanfic on the continuation of the Dragonslayer legends book. I own none of these characters, locations, etc, Tui. T Sutherland owns them. I own any OC characters, OC locations, and the plot.

Wren's perspective

Wren sighed, as she moved back underneath a giant pile of leaves, hearing wings flapping closer toward their hidden village under the trees. She also saw Ivy and Leaf scrambling out of their huts to go hide in their piles of leaves, accidentally bumping into each other, Wren smiled slightly as she saw them both blush slightly before going quickly into the leaves. She was going to have to tease Leaf about this for awhile.They watched the approaching shadow move swiftly, covering the patches of sunlight that made its way through high leaves of the trees. Soon she caught a glimpse of pale orange scales on a small, wiry dragon.

"Sky! Sky! Over here! Wren started to shout happily.

Sky's head swung toward her voice and he smiled in delight as he started to descend on them. Now Wren could see Rowan and Grover on top of Sky's back with bags of food and supplies strapped on a makeshift "saddle near his tail.

"Remind me never to ride a dragon again" Rowan garbled out, looking slightly sick.

"Hey Wren!" Sky responded excitedly "Look what I found!" Sky opened his claws, as Grover and Rowan climbed off his back and started unloading their supplies, showing a small snail looking comfortable in the gentle grip of Sky.

"That's nice Sky, are you gonna put him in your snail cage?"

"Of course, he's sooooooo cute" Sky cooed at the snail.

Wren smiled warmly at Sky, and him smiling at her.

Everyone looked at their relatively big village, with a relatively small number of people or dragons living in it.

"Wren, come here, Ivy and I want to ask you something" Leaf called over to her with Ivy close by. Wren walked over in confusion.

"So, since the village is so big now, do you want to try to find people who need homes to come live here?" Ivy said with eagerness.

"Hmm, well who might need to live here, maybe those in the shadow of the indestructible city. But how will we get them to come here. We can't just be like HEY GUYS WE HAVE A VILLAGE COME LIVE IN IT!" And in anycase, we still need to find this Golden Dragon who took the Sandwing's treasure.

"Yeah, maybe we'll do that first then-...wait Sandwings? Is that what they're called?

"Uh huh, the red and orange ones are called Skywings, the sea dragons are Seawings, the white and ice ones are Icewing and well, you get the idea" Wren explained. And when we go look for the golden dragon, maybe we'll find Murderbasket too".

"I still don't think your saying that right Wren. Maybe Deathbringer, Deathsayer, Death-something. It definitely has Death in it." Sky told her.

"Yeah sure" Wren said sarcasticly, when suddenly she hissed "Get down, I hear something."

Everyone scrambled under the makeshift foliage cover, as they heard something crashing through the forest, it didnt sound big enough to be a dragon, maybe a human. As it got closer to their village they could hear panting, almost like a person was out of breath. And then a figure crashed through the trees and into the village.

What did you guys think, I'm sorry this is so short but I wanted to try my hand with this and see if you guys like it. I hope you did. Comment if you did and if you so far like my interpretation of what happens. Vote for my story if you want to support this story and get some friends who like Wings of Fire to try this if you want. Have a great day.

Abduction

Leaf's Perspective

As they watched from their hidden cover, a man in ragged clothes burst through the foliage, panting loudly, he looked scared but also as if he was looking for someone. Suddenly Ivy gasped and they all realised who the man was. Stone

"Uncle Stone!" Ivy cried out in disbelief and worried at the look on Stone's face.

"Ivy, did you hear what happened at Valour?" Stone said, gasping.

"What happened?"

"Well, nothing yet, but there are dragons swarming the area. Not even just the sand dragons, there's mountain dragons, mud dragons and even some ice dragons. I managed to escape to warn you. They nearly got me but I used my invisibility chain. Unfortunately it got snagged on a tree on the way here but by the time I realised, I couldn't go back for it since the dragons were so close."

Leaf was worried. This didn't bode well, what if that golden dragon had actually STOLEN the treasure, and the dragons still thought we had it. And we have no way to get them to leave. Wren would probably just get eaten and Sky might be taken prisoner again.

Wren came back holding her spiked club with Sky right behind her. Then she saw the person was Stone and dropped the club to the ground. "Why are you here, Stone." Wren asked in curiosity.

They explained the situation to Wren. "Did you see anyone pure black or golden dragons there" she asked Stone, who was looking distraught

"Yes actually, I saw a small golden dragon, a large black dragon with one of those colour changing ones, two sea dragons, a mud dragon and another pair of black dragons. They looked like they were sort of sad and almost arguing with the others.

"OHHH MAYBE WE CAN CONVINCE THOSE DRAGONS AND HELP THEM STOP THE OTHERS ATTACKING" Ivy said excitedly.

"No" Everyone else said instantly but they all then looked remorseful as Ivy's face fell.

"Well, I think it's worth a try" Leaf told her, which made her smile slightly. "It might work and what else can we do.

Wren looked at Leaf with a smirk and whispered "OOOOH" in his ear, as he blushed but covered it up. Luckily for him Ivy didn't notice. God dammit Wren, really, now, you have to try and do this in front of everyone. It's bad enough you tease me when we're alone but Stone and Ivy's here.

And then suddenly a dragon as white as the ice in the north of Pyrrhia, and grabbed Leaf tightly in it's claws and threw itself into the sky and started flying away in less than a second. Before Leaf passed out from the pain in his chest as it was squeezed, he heard Wren shouting in anger, and Ivy screaming in fright. He heard more wingbeats behind him.

Maybe it's Sky and Wren coming to-

And everything became black around Leaf.

Ice

Leaf's Perspective.

I know this is weird since I should be doing Ivy's perspective but I want to show Leaf's adventures.

When Leaf awoke the first thing he noticed was that it was cold. Very cold. Then he noticed the ice beyond him, it's freezing air blowing out toward him. As he slowly regained his sense he saw two blurry blue shapes making loud noises. He realised they were dragons, but not just any dragons, Ice Dragons! They were arguing, every once in a while gesturing to the row of metal bars in front of him. Wait, not in front of him, but around him! He gasped and clawed frantically at the cage around him, but nothing happened until one of the Ice dragons noticed him and threw something into his cage. It spattered on the floor and he saw it was some form of rotting animal. He wrinkled his nose in disgust and scooted away from it. The ice dragon frowned slightly, going back to roaring at the other one.

This is just so you understand what the dragons are saying, Leaf, nor anyone else can understand them except Wren.

Ice Dragon 1 (ID1): SEE! It must be defective, it isn't even eating.

Ice Dragon 2 (ID2): Well you got a scavenger so don't complain! Idiot.

Leaf saw one of the dragons lift off the ground and beat it's powerful wings to head toward the iceland. He thought he could almost see something in the distance. It looked like some sort of caste.

"Might as well try, maybe this dragon can understand humans" Leaf muttered. "HEY DRAGON! HELLO? C-A-N Y-O-U U-N-D-E-R-S-T-A-N-D M-E?"

The dragon made a weird face, almost as if it were smiling, but sort of more... malicious.

"Orrgle wriggle roor?" the dragon growled at him curiously.

Leaf sighed, this was getting him nowhere. He got startled as the dragon took out a big key and unlocked his cage and took out the dead thing. He sniffed it and shrugged, then promptly ate it whole. All the while two more dragons had been standing silently behind this one. He barked at them and then they came and lifted his cage up and started to fly upwards. The cage shook furiously in the icy-cold winds and Leaf banged his head on the cage. Before he blacked out he saw the image of some mountains in the far, far distance.

A Plan

Wren's perspective:

Where is he!? God Dammit I officially hate Ice Wings now. I swear if I ever find that dragon I'm gonna tear off his scales one by one.

Wren was seething as she thought of that Icewing suddenly lunging out of the canopy and snatching Leaf in its claws and flying away filled her with rage. As She and Sky flew frantically after Leaf but saw the Icewings shape grow further and further away and eventually disappear.

She was now pacing back and forth in her hut trying to think of where the Icewing must have taken him. It had flown off toward the north. Isn't that where they live? Leaf would never survive there, not unless, they weren't planning on him surviving. Wren growled under her breath.

If those Icewings kill Leaf they're gonna experience a little revenge. Wren style.

Ivy poked her head in Wren's hut "Hey Wren can you help Grover and Rowan unpack their supplies. I have to go and make sure out water supply is still clean."

Wren agreed and left to go find them. As she thought of Rowan and Grover she also thought of Thyme and Cranberry. Poor Cranberry and Thyme. Before they had set up their village they had gone to find water and food. Unfortunately a Sand Dragon had descended on them and ate them each in two bites. Poor Cranberry had to watch Thyme get eating, him screaming in pain and agony as his legs and stomach were bitten off casually by the dragon, and then the rest of him went down. The rest of them had hidden near another sand dune, too terrified to go and help.

Well I tried too but they wouldn't let me. Well I wouldn't have gotten their intime. But still maybe I could have helped.

And Sky couldn't help since he was flying somewhere else scouting it as a good area to set up the village.

Anyway that was in the past and there was nothing Wren could do about it. She had to focus on finding Leaf.

"Hey Rowan, Hey Grover. Have you seen any Icewings or anything" Wren asked them.

"No, but we did see a pair of Icewings flying toward those jagged mountains. There was also about 10 of them flying behind those ones, they had a lot of things, I think one even had a cage." Rowan replied.

"Hmm, thanks." Wren turned around to see Ivy coming back. "Don't worry Ivy, we'll find him and he'll be alright" Wren told Ivy reassuringly.

Ivy smiled weakly at her and then left toward her hut.

Wren went back to her home and started to think.

We saw the Ice dragon head toward the Ice Kingdom. But then Rowan and Grover saw some going toward the mountains...with a cage? Maybe they had him in there? As a pet? Well, it's my only lead so we should go check there.

An hour later Wren gathered up everyone and told them her plan. To head toward the mountain ranges, to try and find those Ice Dragons and find Leaf. After all, it was the only lead they had. But first they needed supplies and they didn't have enough in this village. Especially if they might need to camp out several days or even weeks, seeing as how it was those mountains were huge with hundreds of caves.

So they set off toward the rainforest, Wren and Sky flying through the foliage and Rowan, Grover and Leaf trekking through the trees.

Captured

Wren's perspective

Wren could see many colours throughout the forest and trees, some belonging to exotic fruits, flowers or even some animals. They were deeper in the rainforest now than they had ever been before, simply because they had no need to come this deep, but they had heard of a rumor of a tribe called the "Rainwings" living here, and Wren thought maybe they could help them since from what else she had heard about them they were calm and friendly.

But I swear if I meet one more dragon as silly as sweetface I am going to lose it. That was really frustrating, to think I am a pet? Ha, never gonna happen.

She and Sky were flying slowly surveying the area for any signs of dragons, but, there was nothing. Not even a single scale. But for some reason she had a prickling feeling down her spine and the hair on the back of her head was standing up, it almost felt like something was watching her. Or..multiple somethings.

"Sky bring us down toward the others, let's check if they've seen anything"

Authors note:

I forgot to say, whenever Wren or Sky are speaking human it will be normal dialogue, but if they are speaking dragons I will put a "D" next to their dialogue.

As they landed they startled the others, who had been focusing so intently on the forest they hadn't heard them coming.

"Have you guys seen anything yet" Wren asked them.

"No we haven't, these invisible dragons are so hard to see" Ivy responded.

"Too bad, hopefully...did you say INVISIBLE DRAGONS!" Wren roared.

"Well yeah, didn't Ivy tell you that the forest ones turn invisible?" Grover said.

"I might have gotten distracted while looking for her," Ivy meekly said.

"Um guys, does anyone else feel weird, like if someone was watching you but you don't realize? Sky" asked them.

Suddenly something whizzed through the air toward Sky, just narrowly avoiding his chest. It looked like some dart with a strange liquid on it, maybe poison.

"Run" Wren roared at the others as she turned to face their attackers. Oh they were gonna be sorry but when she looked again she saw what looked like a floating bamboo stick. Then Sky grabbed her before she could steam toward it, and ignored her outraged cries. After a while they had gotten away, or so they thought.

As they were resting and had some water, Wren was still grumbling about not being able to give those weirdos a piece of their own medicine. Then suddenly dragons with all different and vibrant colours appeared around them, one of them with a flower crown.

"Crap" Wren said simply.

Flower Crown: "Who are you and why are you here with your pets?" she asked Sky"

This made Wren even more mad but she managed to keep her mouth shut.

"N-no reason, we're just passing through, me and my pets," Sky said nervously.

Flower Crown: Hmm well then you won't mind coming with us then right.

Sky: S-sure.

Flower Crown: Ok then, guards escort this dragon and his pets to the temporary holding cell.

Guard 1: Umm it broke.

Flower Crown: .....

Guard 1: S-should we just take them back to the village.

Flower crown: Sure, she said sighing.

A cage was brought forward and Sky ushered the humans into it, even though Wren was yelling at all of them. Finally he got her in their and then two Rainwings came forward and grabbed the cage, and they started to head to the Rainwing village.

Murderbasket

Wren's POV

By the time they got to the village Wren was still yelling quite loudly in human, because while she was angry, and she did want to give these stupid flower dragons a fat earache she didn't want them to be so startled they dropped her.

These rainforest dragons had even put the others in a separate cage so Wren didn't deafen all of them.When Wren decided to stop she sat down and looked through the bars of the cage and she saw lots of platforms made of wood and leaves attached to the sides of trees or even sitting on top of some smaller trees.

They started to descend toward a cluster of platforms, some having sleeping rainforest dragons on them. Many also had huts on them, which were almost like buildings.

When they landed they escorted Sky into one, with him glancing back at Wren and the others quickly.

And then a black dragon came forward to greet the one with the flower crown, they smiled at each other, as if they were happy in their presence.

Black Dragon(BD): "Well hello my queen" BD told her.

Flower Crown(FC): "You know you don't have to greet me like that" FC said, sounding amused.

BD: "Well I want too, so I will".

FC: "Ok then. We found this strange dragon, he looks like a Skywing orange that is all washed out. He also had 4 scavengers with him, this one here is quite fierce" she said pointing to Wren.

Then the black dragon looked right at Wren and looked as if he might faint, and the Wren recognised him too, with his strong build and slyness about him.

It was Murderbasket.

Wren started pointing to Murderbasket and then herself, and then to what looked like an empty hut. He knew what she was trying to do and so did Flower Crown after observing Bandit at Jade Mountain Academy.

FL: "Hmm, it looks like she wants to go in that hut with you. I wonder why" FL said, smirking at the nervous look on his face. "Now what could make you this nervous.

BD: No, it's fine I don't need to go in there. It's fine, I'll be heading off now

FL: Hang on, I order you to go into that hut with the scavenger. And if you're so scared, I'll come along too.

Despite his pleas Flower Crown did not change her mind, and all the while Wren was looking at him, a devilish grin on her face.

When they got inside the hut, and Flower Crown made sure no one was peeping, she told Murderbasket to spill the beans. He responded by saying to let the scavenger do that. Flower Crown was confused until:

Wren: Hey there Murderbasket.

Flower Crowns jaw dropped to the ground in shock, and Murderbasket swallowed and looked down.

Wren: I SAID HELLO THERE MURDERBASKET!

Murderbasket: H-hello Wren...

Flower Crown: What-what the actual-what? How is this happening. This isn't possible. Deathbringer what do you put in my coffee?

Wren: So your name is Deathbringer. Guess Sky was right.

Deathbringer: Glory, I know this seems strange, but it's a talking scavenger.

Wren: And your Glory. And also ALL SCAVENGERS TALK WE JUST DO IT IN A DIFFERENT LANGUAGE.

Glory: Deathbringer you have a lot of explaining to do.

Schedule for New Parts.

I have some major tests coming up so I might not be able to post next week. Make sure to check within 2 days during sunday, by then I will have posted a new part for this and my other fanfic Midnight Frost.

After the next week I will try and do maybe 3 parts a week for this fanfic and 1-2 parts per week for Midnight Frost.. Have a good day all!

Murderb-I mean Deathbringer.

Wren's Perspective (Again :))

Wren was enjoying this, explaining her encounter with Deathbringer to this "Glory" rainwing. As she explained more, Deathbringer's face turned more red and Glory looked more smug when she heard how scared Deathbringer had been of Wren, to the point when she would laugh sometimes. After she finished Deathbringer's head was practically on the floor and his dignity had been lost.

I am going to keep writing like this when characters speak in dragon for this chapter but I may change it since I don't really like reading or writing in bold tbh.

"So basically you cornered Deathbringer in an empty alleyway, and scared him so much he thought you were a dream, and then you accidentally stabbed him and he got even more scared and then he took you to the Sandwing palace." Glory asked Wren. She was looking extremely amused at how the "Brave and fearless" Deathbringer had reacted to Wren.

"Yep, Yep and Yep. Wren replied.

"Wow, I never knew. And it's amazing how you can talk and other scavenger's can talk. Maybe later after I'm doing handling to council and requests for today you could tell me more about scavengers. After hearing this, I'm pretty interested." Glory told Wren.

She agreed and then Glory left the hut. Then it clicked in Wren's mind what Glory had said, along with wearing a crown, she must be the queen. Deathbringer, now not really feeling as humiliated since Glory wasn't heard, asked Wren to tell him what happened after he left her at the castle.

She explained how she had staked out the place, and managed to get inside, where she met Rose and how she had helped her find what she needed to kill the dragon holding Sky captive. Lot's and lot's of mouse poison. And how he had been so rude as to die right in the middle of the battlefield by the poison instead of inside where she was. But then how Rose had gotten a spare key and helped her get out and so on. All the while Deathbringer was listening with an interested expression.

After listening to Wren's story, he took her to where Sky and the other's were, and told them how she had met Murderb-Deathbringer, and how she had also now met the queen of the rainwings, Glory. And also how Deathbringer was absolutely OBSESSED WITH HER! When Wren told him what she had said to the other's he went red in the face before making it normal and protesting he was just her bodyguard.

At the end of the day Wren met Glory in her hut and started to tell her[Glory] her[Wren's] story. How her parents had sacrificed her to the dragons, and how she had found and subsequently raised Sky, and then stumbled upon Deathbringer and how she did afterwards. When Wren was done Glory nodded but still had an air of disbelief at the fact a scavenger was talking to her. Then Wren pestered Glory until she told her her story. Glory told her about being raised under a mountain, as a prophecy dragon. And how she and her friends had saved Pyrria from a war and how Sunny had met some humans near where Wren described freeing from the "Dragonslayer". Wren asked if this Sunny was a goldenish colour, and had no tail barb. When Glory said yes, with surprise at how Wren knew this, Wren told her how those humans Sunny had found were her friends, Leaf and Ivy.

Later on after Wren introduced Deathbringer and Glory to Ivy, Sky and Rowan and Grover.

Also probs won't be mentioning Rowan and Grover don't really care about them so oof.

Then when Ivy got Wren to translate "Can you help us. There are dragons attacking my former home, if you have seen it there is a tunnel there which leads into our underground city". Glory grimaced and Wren translated how those dragons were anti-scavenger since they had actually killed some more dragons across the 20 year war. They had information that a scavenger den was near there and they were trying to find it to kill the scavengers. She and the other dragonets of destiny had tried to get them to stop but they wouldn't listen.

Ivy was desperate and then Wren translated a savior of a sentence. Ivy asked if they had seen a group of Icewings or just one at this Jade Mountain who had a pet scavenger. When Glory answered yes, and his name was Winter, Wren's eyes blazed with fury and surprised and started roaring at Deathbringer and her, where was this Icewing and where was their weapons.

Ater being calmed down she told them how this could be his brother and told them how he was abducted. Now that Wren knew where she had to go, and Deathbringer said he would get them into the school, they set off toward Jade Mountain. Toward Leaf. Toward her brother.

Free?

Leaf's Perspective

Meanwhile at Jade Mountain.

As Leaf woke up, he saw he was still in the cage, except it now had a pile of hay in one corner and a water bowl in the other. As he became less groggy, he saw the Icewing who had stayed after they argued with the other one before. It was lying on a ledge coated with Ice and then he saw a sand dragon, a sandwing? As Wren called them.

Leaf sighed, he missed Wren. And also Ivy. He really hoped Ivy was ok. He saw that the Sandwing was talking to the Icewing. Or more like talking at him. The icewing seemed to be ignoring him or occasionally growling at him. From the broken words leaf had learned in Dragon from Wren he could hear what they were saying.

I will do the normal way dragons talk except I will use words Leaf understands in italics.

SW: Bro you can't keep ignoring me. You need to help complete our homework.

IW: No I don't. Good Night.

Leaf watched as the Sandwing sighed and turned toward a rocky desk like thing, holding out some paper and starting to write on it. Leaf turned to lay on his hay and slowly drifted off to sleep.

The next morning

Leaf woke up to something poking him in the back. Something sharp. It stopped and he turned toward it, realising it was the Icewing. He growled and shoved something dead and disgusting into Leaf's cage. Leaf moved back, wrinkling his nose. It was another dead animal. Leaf just stared with hollow eyes at the Icewing, before the icewing became uncomfortable, taking the animal and leaving the cave.

Later on, Leaf had managed to nudge over a bendy and twisty stick near his cage, using it to jam and break the cage. When the icewing tried to get him out using the key, and being unsuccessful, he left the key next to where Leaf was in the cage, and left the cave. Then Leaf took the stick out carefully and used the key to unlock the cage.

He decided to run, soon passing the Icewing going back to the cave, who looked bewildered and then furious as he dropped another key and scrambled after him. Leaf had though managed to get into a place crowded with dragons. He could hear their loud shouting and growling, and what was strange, occasionally a chicken clucking. And then tight claws grabbed him and Leaf panicked as he looked into the eyes of a black dragon.

But instead of immediately eating Leaf, the dragon looked at him with gentle and kind eyes, before turning in front of her where the Icewing was standing. He glared and proceeded to shout at the small black dragon, Leaf was thinking of calling her a "Nightwing" (lol im just doing this cause i dont wanna keep saying black dragon, takes too long to type).

Then the Sandwing who stayed in the cave with the Icewing stepped and, and after a while the nightwing let Leaf go in front of the Icewing. They talked for a while as well, before the nightwing gave Leaf a blueberry, but a GIGANTIC ONE. He was sceptical but took a small bite out of it. It was so delicious and Leaf was starving, so he downed it in a matter of seconds. Later on Leaf was locked back in his cage, with a pile of different assorted fruits opposite his "hay bed".

He went to sleep again. A routine ensued, every morning, Frosty (As leaf called him) would wake him up, poke a fruit toward him, and observe Leaf eating this fruit with interest. Then the Sandwing's head, who Leaf named Phil (For no apparent reason)and nagged Frosty until he left with him. Then Leaf sat in his cage the whole day for 3 days. Gradually, Leaf found himself growing on the icewing, who was actually treating him nicely, giving lots of food and water, and giving him clay to use to play.

Then on the 4th day Frosty rushed into the cave and grabbed Leaf in his cage, which spilled the water and made it and the hay fall through the bars of the cage, and his fruits to pop and also fall through. Frosty carried him outside, on a clearing next to the mountain. He nudged Leaf out tried to get him to leave, but Leaf didn't want to. He wanted to stay, since he had nowhere else to go, and did not know where his little village with the others was from here or whether Wren would be there. And Ivy. Oh he missed Ivy.

Then Frosty broke his train of thought by roaring at him, and then he stopped as he saw some other dragons flying toward him, two being Phil and the nightwing he had named Midnight. Frost roared at him again and brandished his claws, so Leaf ran away and slid down the mountain, weaving between the trees as he heard the group of dragons roaring.

The Lonely Dragon

Haha tricked you onto clicking didn't I? Well, I would like to tell all of you reading, if you checking my Voting book you will see I have put in the entry's for the competition. Please go vote over there, if you do I will worl to make 4-5 chapters for one week on either this or the Winterwatcher fanfic, you guys decide. Please go vote and have a good day!

A Three Part View

Leaf's Perspective

Leaf was weaving in between the trees as the sound of wings flying closer grew louder and louder. His heart was pounding and he ran so fast he didn't even register the evil red eyes following him, almost as if it were playing with it's food.

Then suddenly the dragon grew bored of this game and pounced on Leaf, pinning him to the ground. And as it slowly lifted him up, and opened its giant maw, Leaf thought he was going to die. This was the end, and there was nothing he could do. And Ivy. Oh Ivy. He hadn't been able to tell her what he'd wanted too. And now he never would.

Then a Seawing dived through the trees and started growling angrily at the skywing. Reluctantly it dropped Leaf and they flew off toward Jade Mountain. Leaf sighed with relief and sat against the trees.

Where do I go now? I have nowhere else. I don't know where to go to get towards our village again, and the others are probably searching for me right now. Oh my what am I gonna do?

Leaf wandered for a few hours before it grew dark and he had to make camp. He was able to start a fire after much trying and cooked a squirrel he had caught earlier. He made a small bed out of leaves and vines and drifted off to sleep.

And when he awoke it was still dark, but he was, once again, in the clutches of a snarling dragon, with its giant blue eyes.

Wren's Perspective

Get ready guys this is where the story picks up! What will happen I wonder...

As Wren was flying on Sky's back, along with Ivy, she gazed in a sort of wonder at just how big the mountain was up-close. It was gigantic, maybe even bigger than Mt. Fred (sorry i couldn't come up with anything else as a name pls dont hurt me).

She also saw where Rowan and Grover were sitting. Surprisingly they were riding on Deathbringer, who looked none too pleased at this arrangement. She hadn't been paying attention since she had realised that they were about to find Leaf!

If they haven't eaten him already. No, don't think about that. Know way would they DARE to eat Leaf. I swear if they've eaten him I'm gonna wreck this school!

Wren's perspective on the mountain changed with her thoughts, now it was looming with its giant fangs on the side, and a great maw at the top of the beast.

Wren was talking to Sky in human for a bit before she grew bored and decided to talk to Glory, since she might be able to tell Wren some more about dragons. She told Wren about some of their customs and practises, such as how the Icewings were rigid and strict with their "circles" (which Wren didn't get) but some like the Rainwings were generally easy going and loved to party and have fun. Also sleeping. Sleeping was a yessir for the Rainwings.

Then they arrived. The landing pad was deserted but inside they could faintly hear the chatter of dragons.

Ivy's Perspective.

She was nervous. After all she was finally here, at Jade Mountain. Where Leaf was. Poor Leaf, he didn't deserve this. She felt angry at the Icewing that had taken him, but then realised that the Icewing probably didn't even know that humans were intelligent. Infant they probably just thought Leaf was another animal, similar to a cow or sheep.

No maybe more like a-a dog. After all if they were cows or sheep then the dragons would-would eat them.

Ivy didn't like this thought rail so she changed it. As she slid off Sky's back she gazed into the cave on Jade Mountain, and overall the mountain was beautiful. She could hear the faint chattering of dragons and their talons scraping against the rough rock. She was a little afraid, but she knew as long as Sky, Glory and the other dragons were here she would be safe. And then a giant roar came from inside and all the chatter stopped. And an angry Seawing, along with a confused looking Sandwing, a blind looking nightwing and a hungry looking mudwing came out of the cave.

KILL IT KILL IT KILL IT

Wren's Perspective

At Jade Mountain

As Wren watched from the back of Sky, as they landed, she saw a mixed group of dragons come out. An angry Seawing, confused Sandwing, a blind maybe Nightwing and a hungry mudwing. But when they saw Glory they smiled as if she was the best thing for them in the world and crowded around her.

Wren heard them talking to Glory and she was able to pick up their names. Tsunami the Seawing, Clay the Mudwing, Starflight the Nightwing (Who is blind) and Sunny the Sandwing. As Wren looked closer she also saw that the Sandwing was a weird golden colour and she had no tail barb. Strange.

Hopefully their chatter will be done soon. Then I'll ask about Leaf. But I"l let them talk for now since they seemed good friends of Glory's.

Then they noticed the others, the four humans and the new Skywing. Tsunami narrowed her eyes at them, so Wren did the same to her. For a moment the Seawing was bewildered as she had noticed this, but must have decided this was an illusion, forgetting about Wren.

"So Glory, who is this. Why did you bring him here" Tsunami asked.

"H-hello I'm Sky" He said Shyly.

"Yes, he's Sky. Oh also remember when you saw that Deathbringer was scared of scavengers" Glory smirked.

Deathbringer paled noticeably and hung his head down in advance. Wren smiled as she realised what Glory was doing.

"Yeah" The other dragons said.

"Well. let me introduce you to..... Wren!" Glory pointed her talon at Wren.

The dragons bent over and peered at Wren, who by now had gotten off Sky and was crossing her arms and looking at them with a smile.

"Hey guys how ya doing" Wren asked them in dragon.

They all froze, looking at her in shock, well, except for the nightwing. Sunny looked shocked but slightly delighted. Clay looked as if he had seen a ghost, and Tsunami looked plain scared and aghast.

Suddenly Tsunami roared out "KILL IT KILL IT KILL IT" and started running toward Wren. Before she got there however she was tackled by Sky, who looked furious since this strange new dragon had just suddenly decided to kill Wren. He got off her and huffed at the Tsunami, coiling his tail protectively around Wren.

They were shocked still, and asked Glory to explain. She told them how scavengers, which are actually called "humans" are just as intelligent as dragons, have their own cities, towns etc, and just try to stay alive since dragons eat them.

The Wren took over and told them how she met Sky, then how she scared Deathbringer and helped convince him not to kill them, and how she met Glory.

"OH WAIT THAT MEANS I WAS RIGHT! And you guys said they weren't smart. Oh also, have you met Flower? I doubt it but she was in the Sandwing palace you went too", Sunny asked Wren eagerly.

"Flower? Wait do you mean Rose? She lives with Prince Smolder right?" Wren answered.

"YES SHE DOES! I can't believe you know her. This is so cool" Sunny grinned, while the other dragon's just stared at Wren in awe and fascination.

Then Wren told them about Leaf, who Sunny recognised as one of the scavengers she met, and then she noticed Ivy, who was looking shy and a little scared but awed at the same time, and how they were trying to find him. They told them how he had been abducted and it looked as if he was taken to Jade Mountain by an Icewing.

They looked sad for her and told her the news. The dragon, who was called Winter, had left with his "winglet" (?????) and they had seen him let Leaf go a day ago. Wren was furious at them, and at herself, for not getting here intime and now Leaf could be dead.

Then Sky plopped her on his back, took Ivy, told Deathbringer to keep Rowan and Grover safe, who had been silent throughout this ordeal and he flew off.

Sky's Perspective

He noticed that another Skywing came out of the cave. She looked weird, with blue eyes like his but her scales were almost, smoldering. He could see steam coming out of them, and he had this strange feeling that he knew her somehow. But he ignored this and kept flying.

Peril's Perspective

She came out of the cave, as she saw Clay go there and she needed some help sorting out one of the new caves they had carved, since the students were doing tests and she didn't want to disturb them. She saw a strange looking Skywing flying away. He had peach/ orange coloured scales and he seemed...familiar. Almost as if she knew him. She shrugged it off and went to Clay.

You deserve these perspective's.

Leaf's Perspective

Leaf could faintly hear the crackling of fire. Slowly, as he awoke he could feel something. It felt...rough. Then as he completely regained his senses he felt he was tied in ropes. And now he could feel a heat. It was a fire! He realised he was covered in ropes and was tied to a tree branch, and a blazing fire was roaring below him!

Leaf was scared as he looked for an escape. Something? Anything! Then a tidal wave of water splashed over him and doused the fire. Something picked him up and gently untied him from the tree. The dragon that had taken him before looked at him, it's eyes being unreadable but with a faint smidge of sympathy.

Then they both became aware of another dragon, who was rolling on the ground laughing. The first dragon, whose leaf had decided to call Blue, after it's eyes, dropped Leaf carefully and grunted at the other dragon, who was still laughing.

Leaf slowly looked around, drinking in the sights. He saw now they were near some hot springs, because just a few hundred metres away down the hill he was on he saw them, bubbling and steaming. He also saw these strange dragons were staying in makeshift tents and they had a small fire beyond, in which they were roasting some fish and birds over a spit.

And then, the one with blue eyes talked.

"Hejo hooman" Blue said to Leaf.

His eyes grew wide and he fell down in shock, as the only dragon he knew that knew human language was SKY!?!?

"Uhhh Hello?" Leaf stammered out.

"Je onderstunds mah" Blue cried in delight

"Yes I understand you. But HOW DO YOU KNOW HUMAN LANGUAGE" Leaf shrieked.

"Abservation of hoomans" Blue answered.

Sky's Perspective

(You've earned his perspective by reading this fanfic for so many chapters)

Sky felt peaceful. It was so relaxing being high up in the sky, feeling the air brushing his wings gently and the clouds dissolving around him keeping him cool. He smiled since it was so nice.

Too bad Leaf can't be here. I hope he's ok. I wonder what Wren will do if he gets hurt?

Sky stopped smiling. "Hey Wren! We're getting close to where those other two dragons saw Leaf near last. Can you help me try and see for anything" Sky asked Wren.

"Yeah sure!" Wren said in excitement.

Probably since she might be seeing Leaf again.

And as they were landing, a boulder flew through the air and hit Sky right in the chest.

Peril's Perspective

(YAS BOI I'VE BEEN WAITING TO DO THIS)

Peril was lying on her rock ledge in her personal cave, trying out a new fireproof scroll Starflight had made. That was sweet of him but Peril mostly suspected it was because he didn't want Peril to accidentally set fire to the scrolls, even though she never even goes into the library.

Surprisingly it was actually working, and she was able to read the scroll! Peril was really excited because she had never been able to read before and she was enjoying it immensely. Her thoughts drifted to Clay, who, right now was teaching biology, and was assigning a project where the students had to build a model of a particle, (Wink Wink😏 crossover secret).

Then she thought about that strange dragon and those like 5 scavengers he had with him. For some reason he had seemed really familiar, almost as if she had known him once. He also had an unusually light orange, almost peach scale colour.

She was curious and since she had seen him talking to Clay and the others, she would ask them later. For now since she knew they were teaching she just decided to continue reading, an unsettling feeling nagging in the back of her head at the thought of the strange dragon and for some reason, her mother. Kestrel.

Sorry for the short chapter and LONG delay. Since it's the end of the school year I have A LOT of tests and stuff lately. This upcoming week I have like four tests. Right now I'll try to get 1 chapter for this a week and when the school holidays are here I'll do 2-3 chapters a week.

Names

Leaf's Perspective

He was still staring in disbelief at these two, strange dragons. Somehow, someHOW?!, they knew how to speak human language, at least enough to be understandable. Right now they were cooking and cutting some more meat for themselves, and as Leaf noticed, they were cutting small bits, most likely for him.

He had only thought it was possible for Sky to speak dragon, since he had been practically raised by Wren and had learned her language, every other dragon had not had the same experience and they definitely wouldn't allow their kids to be raised by humans.

So it was a very big surprise when two of them had kidnapped him and started speaking in english. However broken the english was. Blue looked over at him and smiled, a kind look in his eyes. Blue was nice to Leaf, but the laughing dragon (who leaf decided to call Hyena) just kept pranking both of them! One day it would be a very badly sculpted zombie dragon poking its head into their, or Blue would have a bunch of soil fall down off a bunch of branches as Blue entered their cave.

But, life was good. For now he had two nice dragons as company, he was safe and not hungry. But god did he miss the others. He missed Wren and her snarky comments more than he thought he would and... he missed Ivy with a ferocious feeling in his gut he couldn't explain.

Blue came up to him. "You human need any help thing?" Blue asked him.

"No, I'm fine, thanks. Also I never asked your name?" Leaf responded.

"Name is Summit. Friend is Cyclone. What your name is" Blue asked him curiously.

"My name is... Leaf."

Oh my god I am so sorry for these massive delays and short chapters lately. Again I say I have some family stuff and extra tests and exams for the end of the year for this week. BUT! This si the last week of school so I will update a bunch more.

Oh Shit

Sky's Perspective
(So sorry for not updating for so long guys! I've just had so much going on with C19 and a bunch of other family crap that's been going on. But anyway, onto the story!)

Suddenly everything was wings and air and screaming and the ground rushing up to meet Sky, and he tried to stay in the air, the distant sounds of Wren screaming and Ivy shrieking growing softer, and softer, and then the ground, its green and brown stretching for miles, rushed up to meet Sky and all was darkness.

"Ughhh what the" Sky groaned as he blinked his eyes. He felt a sudden sharp pain in his side and yelped at it, as it felt like someone had shoved a molten rock into his chest. He touched one claw to his side and felt sick as it came back slick with red blood. He slowly looked around and saw where he had landed. It seemed to be some sort of clearing.

Thank god I didn't scuer (don't know spelling lol) myself on a tree. Now what happened?

Sky slowly recalled what happened and then yelped. What had happened to Wren and Ivy! Where were they? Sky felt queasy. Oh god what if they fell off while I was falling? We were so high up, they...they might have not-

Sky cut off this thought process because it was too painful to think about. And as he started to lose hope and decided to just lie down and let things happen as they will, he heard someone shout "SKY?!". It sounded like Wren.

"Wr-wren," Sky managed to croak out before blacking out once more.

Wren saw it in slow motion. She saw the massive boulder fly out of the trees at lightning speeds, saw it slam into Sky, saw him start tumbling down through the air, saw Ivy reach out to her, saw herself jump off and with Ivy grab onto a tree.

Then they both started to slip. They felt the wood start to peel. Heard it creaking. Then saw the branch break and felt the ground smash into her back. She woke up and groaned groggily. She felt the creaking of her spine and winced at the pain of it. She looked around and then noticed Ivy, who was lying on her side not moving.

"Ivy? IVY WAKE UP! IVY!!! Ivy, Ivy Ivy Ivy IVY?" Wren said shaking Ivy. Then Wren noticed Ivy wasn't breathing. She didn't even have a heartbeat. Wren choked back a sob, as they had become close in the time they, Sky and Leaf had spent out in the wilderness.

Wren had heard of a way people started other people's hearts. She started doing what the villagers had called "CPR", she pumped her hands on Ivy's chest, tearing up a little as nothing happened.

Nonononononono not you too! First Leaf and then Sky and now you please! Why is this happening, why is everyone getting hurt?!

And then as if touched by god's hand Ivy sat up and started breathing heavily. Wren hugged her extremely tight.

"Cant...breath" Ivy wheezed weakly. Wren let go and explained what had happened and how she had thought Ivy was dead. Luckily she wasn't. They quickly took inventory of what they had. They decided to go try to find Sky and see if he was ok.

Wren shouted Sky's name until her voice was hoarse and she couldn't talk any longer. And then as she was walking away from her current position to go back to the temporary camp that had been made earlier, she heard a small but definite "Wr-wren". Wren was sure this was Sky and with new renewed optimism she started running in the direction of the voice.

She reached a small clearing and gasped at what she saw. At who she saw. Sky was lying on his side, blood gushing from a massive wound in his side. His head hung limp. And then his eyes fluttered open slowly before closing again.

And then the sound of a large something pierced the silence. And it was coming fast.
And then it burst through the trees and Wren paled, she started trembling and shaking.

"Oh shit" Wren said.
